Accountant by trade and entrepreneur by choice. A number-crunching, tax saving, business optimizing machine.

As a Certified Public Accountant, Luis honed his craft in public accounting quickly developing expertise in the construction and medical fields. He grew attached to the construction industry and found himself consulting on a variety of levels including general bookkeeping, cost accounting, tax, and software solutions.

Most recently, Luis was a controller for a Midwest construction company managing the financial direction of the residential and commercial divisions. Combining his accounting knowledge with his passion for process improvement led him to leverage the latest technology within the industry to create a more efficient and profitable company.

Within the past five years he also led the financial team of a social media agency startup through acquisition, served on numerous boards of young professional organizations and is active in the startup community. He now spends his days at lienwaivers.io helping facilitate fair payment exchange across construction projects.
